Licenses and Cisco Unity Connection Clusters
In a Cisco Unity Connection (high availability) environment, only the publisher server needs to be configured and connected with the ELM to obtain the license status and for the license enforcement. When the publisher server stops functioning (for example, when it is shut down for maintenance), the subscriber server handles all the incoming calls for the cluster for a 60 days grace period. However, if the publisher server does not resume its normal function within the 60 days grace period, Unity Connection will move to the "Expire" state.

Changing Dropped Call Recovery Settings
If you inadvertently disconnect while listening to or sending a message, the Dropped Call Recovery feature allows you to call back into Cisco Unity within a specified period of time and resume the activity without losing your place.
When enabled for message playback, the feature applies to terminated calls as you are listening to a new or saved message. It does not apply to terminated calls as you are listening to a receipt or deleted message. If you call back during the recovery time period, you are prompted to continue listening to the message.

NEW QUESTION: 24
When a user password is changed on Cisco Unified Communications Manager Express, how is that change propagated to Cisco Unity Express?
A. The Cisco Unity Express administrator needs to synchronize the user account in Cisco Unified Communications Manager Express by importing the user again.
B. The Cisco Unity Express administrator needs to change the password and PIN every time a change is made to the user account in Cisco Unified Communications Manager Express.

C. The change is automatic; there is no Cisco Unity Express administrator intervention required.
D. The user password in Cisco Unity Express does not need to match the user password in Cisco Unified Communications Manager Express because they are separate systems.
E. The Cisco Unity Express administrator needs to change the user password to match the password in Cisco Unified Communications Manager Express.

NEW QUESTION: 25
A Cisco Unity Express administrator has configured three applications: voice mail and two auto-attendants.
Cisco Unity Express supports a maximum of eight ports. The voice-mail application is configured for three maxsessions. The two auto-attendants are configured for four maxsessions each. What will be the result if three voice-mail sessions are in use and three callers dial into both auto-attendants?
A. All the sessions will be permitted because 10% more ports are supported per Cisco Unity Express license.
B. It will depend on which caller tries to reach the auto-attendant last. That call will not go through.
C. The Cisco Unity Express auto-attendant will place the call on hold for up to 30 seconds to wait for a port to open up. If a port does not open up, the call is dropped.
D. An application can borrow a single port from another application if one is available to handle a peak call load. If there are no ports available, the call is dropped.
